Portrait des hommes et des pères de la communauté d'expression anglaise au Québec et de leur rapport aux services, a report by Roy et al. (2021) based on an analysis of recent surveys and public data, identified five essential ways family services can better address the realities of English-speaking fathers.

LANGUAGE

Language is critically important, as it is the biggest barrier to accessing services and is a major source of disparity across Quebec.

CULTURE

Despite their common language and mindset, English speakers come from many different cultures, which has a huge impact on how they approach services aimed at fathers in English-speaking communities.

SOCIOECONOMICS

The specific vulnerabilities of fathers in English-speaking communities make this an important factor to consider.

FORMS OF MASCULINITY

The different forms of masculinity found among English-speaking fathers shape their expectations around gender roles and approaches to community services.

FATHERHOOD

It's important not to discount the breadth of values and symbols associated with fatherhood in the different cultures that make up the English-speaking communities.
